City Council expands Revitalization Area

by John A. Fitzpatrick

The area designated as the City of Lemon Grove Commercial Revitalization Area was extended westward to Massachusetts Avenue Tuesday by action of the City Council.

The Revitalization Area, formerly encompassing an area within about three blocks of the intersection of Broadway and Lemon Grove Avenue, will now include the strip of land on the south side of Broadway between Lemon Grove Avenue and Massachusetts Avenue. Businesses along this strip will now be eligible for city revitalization grants.

In a matter related to the extension of the Revitalization Area, Lemon Grove Motorcycles, which became eligible for city revitalization funds by the council's action, was awarded a $10,000 Commercial Rehabilitation grant for store front improvements on the property at 7345 Broadway by the Lemon Grove Community Redevelopment Agency.

Bill Silverthorn, of Lemon Grove Motorcycles, who has been involved with motorcycles in Lemon Grove "since 1968," made a presentation which detailed the company's plans to remove the asphalt in front of the store and replace it with a raised cement display area.

"I just want to enhance the appearance of the store and make it look a little more professional," said Silverthorn. "I've been here a long time, and I intend to stay."

According to City Manager Doug Yount the billboard behind the store also will be removed when the current lease expires in about two years.

"It will come down," said Silverthorn.

Although Lemon Grove Motorcycles' application for a redevelopment grant was cited as the reason that the redevelopment area needed to be extended at this time, Yount pointed out that the city may want to consider making redevelopment grants to other businesses along that stretch of Broadway in the future, stressing the "visual as well as economic" impact of improvements to the area.

The improvements planned for Lemon Grove Motorcycles were presented to the council, in addition to the presentation made by Silverthorn, by means of a new overhead projector/computer display system which was being demonstrated in connection with an earlier action of the council.

The council approved a motion earlier in the meeting to allocate $11,000 to purchase a state-of-the-art computer system which includes an interface to an overhead projector, and an interactive graphics tablet that allows drawing on the screen.

The new display system was acquired primarily to assist law enforcement with briefing situations such as precede search warrant service, SWAT operations, and other incidents where large numbers of personnel are involved.

"I can think of a recent situation," said Captain Bill Flores. "We were planning to close down Broadway in the apprehension of two murder suspects."

The system can import graphic images from video or computer sources, allowing a briefing officer to display locations, circle key elements of the picture, and operate the computer's mouse from a hand-held graphic tablet.

"It's kind of like the John Madden theory," quipped Tiffany Brown of Missouri Western, the manufacturer's representative.

The council also approved a $25,000 grant to Berry's Athletic Supply for improvements to retrofit the old Crocker Bank building which they occupy so that it matches the architectural style and color of the trolley station and the Empire Beauty Supply building.

The new computer-assisted overhead projector system was also used to take a detailed look at the intersection of Massachusetts Avenue with Lemon Grove Avenue, Canton Drive and Ensenada Drive.

"The Traffic Commission has had the issue of the safety and the capacity of this intersection brought before it," said Les Ruh, city engineer.

Councilman Craig Lake described the location as "a great big, huge, dangerous intersection."

"I don't want to sacrifice safety for capacity," said Lake.

The council discussed alternatives such as a weight limit restriction, but did not want to prohibit or re-route deliveries to the area.

The council voted to appropriate $4,000 to study the intersection and come up with alternatives that would improve safety without hampering the intersection's capacity.

In other matters the council:

• Heard from citizen John Wood about the lights at Bob Baker Toyota, the speed limit sign on Central Avenue and other concerns.

Teen dance launches new youth group

Teens with a Cause

After two months of planning, Teens with a Cause announced its formation with a dance at the Lemon Grove Recreation Center - and it was, by all appearances, a grand success. Some of the leaders of the group of middle schoolers are pictured on the right. Shown are (from left, standing) Eddie Bryan, vice president; Crystal Farr and Joel Gutierrez, co-presidents; and (kneeling) Lisa Lawson, publicity chairperson. Not pictured are Rafie Sahial, sports chairperson; Natia Ingram, entertainment chairperson; and Tralicia Carroll, community service chairperson.

Several local businesses gave the group some help in getting started - McDonalds, Grove Pastry Shop, Subway, Da Boyz Pizza, Berry's Athletic Supply and Empire Beauty Supply.

Nearly four hundred middle school students attended a dance Friday night planned by their peers. Held at the Lemon Grove Recreation Center, students danced to music by a video disc jockey, played games and snacked on pizza, sub-sandwiches and sodas. The dance organizers are participants of Teens with a Cause, a new youth group in Lemon Grove.

About thirty-five students have been meeting each week for the past two months to help form the group. "We planned a dance as our first event because we thought it would be something really fun and that it would help us to tell other kids about Teens with a Cause," said Joel Gutierrez a student at Palm Middle school, who was elected co-president of the group.

"I work with a lot of kids and know that local youth really need more positive outlets for their energy outside of school," said Eric Ohlson, an advisor to the group and a school social worker at Lemon Grove Middle School. They want to plan other fun activities and participate in community service too. Rafie Sahial, a student at Lemon Grove Middle School, shares some examples, "the group says they want to play sports against the police or fire fighters, maybe have a roller-rink party, help clean-up Lemon Grove and that sort of thing."

Teens with a Cause is a collaborative program of the Lemon Grove Project, Lemon Grove School District and the Lemon Grove Department of Parks and Recreation. According to Sharon Snyder, Student Well-being Coordinator for the County Office of Education, which awarded a mini-grant for the project, "the intent of the program is to prevent alcohol and drug use among middle school-aged youth by providing positive, supervised activities for them during non-school hours."

Teens with a Cause is open to all middle school-aged youth in Lemon Grove, including students from Lemon Grove Middle School, Palm Middle School and St. John of the Cross School. The group meets weekly from 3 to 4:30 p.m. on Thursday afternoons in the Lemon Grove Community Center, located at 3146 School Lane.

"Our hope is that Teens with a Cause will provide kids with a sense of belonging, a chance to make friends and have fun, and encourage them to lead healthy lives," added Nancy McCadam, director of Parks and Recreation. Important to the group's success is the commitment of the whole community, not just teens, but their parents, local business owners and other community members who can help to support the youth. Karen Zaustinsky, director of the Lemon Grove Project encourages local teens, their parents and other community members to participate in making the decisions and carry out the group's efforts.

City employees CARE about Lemon Grove

Lemon Grove residents are indeed fortunate. Most of us know that we have excellent people working for the city, the Lemon Grove Fire Department and the Lemon Grove Sheriff's Department - people who are dedicated to their jobs.

During the month of December, we were reminded again that these people not only care about the job they do, but they also care about the people in Lemon grove.

It seems that we take for granted how much the Firefighters, the Sheriff's Deputies and staff and the Recreation Department do for children in Lemon Grove. All of these people go far beyond job descriptions in the ways they work with and care for children.

The Adopt-a-Child program was a great example. Not only did the Lemon Grove Sheriff's deputies hold their annual Breakfast with Santa to benefit a number of families, they this year, as they have before, made a large monetary contribution to the Adopt-a-Child Program.

We know the Firefighters participate in the East County Toy Drive. What you may not know is that they continue to collect toys for Adopt-a-Child when it's done and make a sizeable monetary contribution besides.

Surely we know how much the Recreation Department staff does for children and youth, far beyond job expectations.

For the past several years the Recreation Department has helped with public relations for Adopt-a-Child, shopping for children and many other ways throughout the city.

Thank you Lemon Grove Sheriff's Deputies and staff, Lemon Grove Firefighters and staff and the Recreation Dept. staff for all you do for Lemon Grove's kids.

Joan Pettis

Letter to the editor

The city of Lemon Grove: a member of the cult of nonresponsibility?

Dear Mayor:

On Sept. 27, 1994, the City of Lemon Grove officially took a position before the California Supreme Court that it should not be held responsible when one of its law enforcement officers while on duty commits a crime that could only occur through the use of the law enforcement symbols of authority. That position is no different from the Menendez brothers who claim that they are not responsible for the shotgun murder of their parents. That position is no different from that of Reginald Denny's assailant who claimed that he was not responsible for a brutal beating applied to an innocent citizen because he was involved in a riot. That position is no different than Lorena Bobbitt's contention that she was not responsible when she cut off her husband's penis. The fundamental question is: how could any responsible governmental entity take the position that it is not responsible under circumstances where its own officer commits a crime while on duty using the symbols of authority to commit the act?

To be more specific: On Dec. 27, 1986, a 20-year-old woman, Cara Knott, was driving home at night when she was stopped by a California Highway Patrol Officer, Craig Peyer, who was on duty, in uniform and in a CHP car at the time. He directed her off the freeway down a dark, unlighted off ramp, and then murdered her by beating her to death with his nightstick, strangling her and throwing her off a bridge. At the time of his criminal trial more than 45 women came forward and testified that in the months prior to the murder they also had been ordered off the freeway in a similar manner. None of them would have done so were it not for the authority vested in the CHP. There were five telephone calls complaining about Peyer's conduct in the month preceding the murder, yet the CHP did nothing to correct the situation. At the civil trial the CHP and the State of California claimed that it was not responsible for the act of its law enforcement officer. The intermediate Appellate Court rejected that position based on a recent California Supreme Court decision. The State of California appealed that decision to the California Supreme Court and on Sept. 27, 1994, the City of Lemon Grove filed an amicus brief with other governmental entities which joined in claiming that there should be no responsibility. After thorough briefing of the issue, your position was rejected by the California Supreme Court.

• Heard a report from Councilman Lake regarding the Solid Waste Authority's meeting last week, which established a standard tipping rate for all of San Diego County of $55/ton. The Solid Waste Authority also discussed plans to re-constitute a clay liner for the Otay facility, and the possibility of closing down the costly San Marcos recycling plant.

"I'm very pleased," said Lake. "I think we broke through at the last meeting."

And it was inaccurately reported earlier that the Lemon Grove General Plan Advisory Committee was increased to 21 members at the urging of Councilman Lake. It was Councilwoman Mary Sessom who first proposed the increase of one member to accommodate the 18- to 25-year-old group. Lake then argued forcefully for the proposal made by Sessom.

B-Words Personal comments of Mayor Bob Burns

Hail to the chief

Welcome Bill Kolander, to Lemon Grove. As the new Sheriff of San Diego County, and the provider of Law enforcement for our city, we look forward to seeing you and working with you in the future. In these difficult times it is imperative that we get the most out of all of our safety services. With finances hard to come by, and the demands upon our police seeming to escalate in a never ending spiral, we cannot let up in our efforts to be more efficient and cost effective.

Since 1977 we have contracted with the Sheriff's Department to be our police force, and have been very well satisfied with that service. We know that we benefit greatly in having the station here in the center of our town. The profile of the many patrol cars, and officers that are constantly going in and out of the facility, gives the impression that we have a much larger force than we actually pay for. Also, being adjacent to our City Hall, it adds a protective factor that extends on out into the center of town as well.

Over the years we have experienced a turnover of leadership in the station. The captains who have served as our "Police Chief" have all been most cordial and cooperative with our city government. From Wayne Dailey, to our present Bill Flores, we could not have had better. It has been my pleasure to meet and know many of the deputies and staff at the station. Riding along with Jerry Hartman and Lou Apodaca was an education. Training as a Senior Patrol candidate under Lenice Lopez and others was something that I point to with pride, and serving with the patrol is both exciting and personally rewarding.

Taking over a large organization such as the Sheriff's Department has to be a very demanding job, even for someone as well qualified as Bill Kolander. The problems of money and the flood tide of crime in our communities are ever present and must be confronted. We well understand these concerns, even though we may haggle some with the department around budget time. Safety services are the top priority of the Lemon Grove City Council, as I read my associates, and while we want to get the most bang for the buck - please, don't read that in the context of sidearms - we are considering improvement for the future.

If I were to have the temerity to suggest to our new Sheriff how Lemon Grove might benefit more in the future, I would ask that the use of the Senior Patrol be expanded to allow them to do some of the mundane duties that the deputies could be relieved of in a reasonable and practical fashion. I would invite him to visit a council meeting to get acquainted with ourselves and our staff. And certainly we would be honored to meet his lovely wife, as well.

Welcome, Bill Kolander to the friendly city with the best climate on earth.

Commentary As seen from a hospital bed

by Paul Treske

For the past week, I've looked at life from a hospital bed. Pretty dreary by and large, but in actuality all I really saw was Charger-Mania!

Honest to goodness, it was all around me, blue and gold and bolts and the rest. All in all, it was the pleasantest hospital stay I've ever spent.

Let me start at the beginning though. Prior to entering the hospital, I made a visit to the ordinarily hyper-austere environment of the Kaiser Cardiac office. There, among the usually grim-faced people sitting there, I saw a clever and colorful "super bolt" mobile hanging over the receptionist's desk area.

Two days later, when I arrived at Scripps Hospitals cardiac unit I found the nurse's station replete with end-to-end "Go Chargers" signs. The lovely lady who showed me to my room was wearing a discreet yellow thunderbolt.

During the relatively minor surgery (I was awake throughout), when the surgical team wasn't talking in highly technical terms about the procedure, they were performing on me, they were talking about the Chargers chances in the Super Bowl. And when I finally arrived back in my new room in recovery, the first nurse who greeted me was replete in white Charger Super Bowl sweat shirt and hat.

It was like this through the whole hospital stay - most gloriously incongruent. Nurses dressed in Charger regalia and bolts everywhere. Even the folks visiting my roommate were "wearing the colors."

Upon leaving on Monday, I was greeted all along the way with lightening bolts and signs with the climax coming as we started up College Hill on I8 in a huge billboard in blue and gold that said simply - "we believe."

In short, San Diego is having a lot of fun. No angst, mind you - we don't live and die over our sports like other cities with nothing else to do. We are not crazy like the fans of Detroit or Pittsburgh or Philadelphia. Lord knows, all of the so-called experts have told us often enough that, as sports fans, we are little more than margarita-sipping, beach-lolling, quiche-eating softies; not "real fans." And those same "experts" have assured us that we have no chance against the Forty-niners; that they will toy with us to the tune of from three to ten touchdowns.

But, happily, we don't care! We're having too good a time to let such mundane things as the final score bother us. "It's only a game" and it's great fun to finally be "in" the super-duper bowl with all of its hype and baloney.

All-in-all, San Diego is having one helluva party this week and who really cares much about what they say on next Monday morning. It's a lot healthier and a lot more fun than those cities have whose very civic life seems to depend only upon winning and being number one.

I love what's going on around me right now and I will proudly wear my Charger shirt and hat no matter the final score. It's been the grandest of rides this fall and this is the fitting, if unexpected end. And, above all, along with the rest of you silly old, beach-going, quiche-eating San Diegans - I believe!

PG Perspectives Having it both ways

by Phillip Giannangeli

It's said often enough that you can't have it both ways. Do you think that stops us from trying? Not in this lifetime. Check out Newt if you don't believe me. Having it both ways is as American as apple pie and motherhood. In fact, it may have even preceded apple pie.

One of the best ways to understand the essence of wanting to have it both ways is to ask someone about lawyers. When you ask people what they think about them, you're likely to hear that lawyers are the scum of the earth. Maybe worse. That's an almost universal perception. Even Shakespeare characterized them as undesirable and unwanted. But given the first faint whiff of a whiplash windfall, our perspective changes quickly. Who's the very first person we're consorting with? It's sure not a man of the cloth. Nope. Bring on the suit in patent leather shoes with a briefcase in hand. Meet my new best friend, the lawyer.

Only when my new best friend the lawyer wants to abscond with about half of what is supposed to be mine do I begin to understand how painfully true the axiom, "You can't have it both ways," is.

We would like to have it both ways when it comes to government too. Many people are of the opinion that the government meddles around a little too much in their lives. Ask Newt. Many people get angry because the government won't do something they think that it should do. Ask Newt. Many people just don't see any conflict in having it both ways. Ask Newt.

There are many other examples of wanting it both ways. We want good old-fashioned, doting doctors to take care of us.

Doctors who make us feel like we're more than just an account receivable. But get stuck in that waiting room a few extra minutes - trapped with all those out of date magazines - and we're fit to be tied. Cheap money-grubber; probably overbooked and is trying to make an extra buck or two.

When it comes to patriotism, both wayers are loyal - up to a point. That point: the market place. Why, we ask, can't that big sign saying 'Made In The U.S.A.' hang over that Honda instead of over there by that Roadmaster? Is there something wrong with buying a Swiss watch, a German camera, a Japanese car, or Italian shoes with money earned from working in American industries?

We try to have it both ways with our kids too. We expect them to toe the line and behave themselves, while we take special delight in telling them about some of the more mean-spirited high jinx we pulled during our youth. We also extol moderation from behind bulging bellies and insist they clean up their language while spicing up our own with appropriate expletives.

I should point out that wanting to have it both ways and being two-faced are not quite the same. Let me give you an example. Newt Gingrich built his career on being the meanest, toughest, and some say the dirtiest cuss in the House of Representatives. Now that he's moved into the Speakership of the House of Representatives, he decries meanness, professes compassion and whimpers that the Democrats are playing dirty politics against him. If you ask Newt, that's what he'll tell you. I hope that clears up the difference between wanting to have it both ways and being two-faced.

Trying to have it both ways is our passion. For instance, I'm having that dilemma right now. You see, I want the Forty-niners to win the Super Bowl, but I'd like to see that Hot Shot Deion Sanders play so poorly that he'd literally cost them the game. Talk about wanting your cake and ...

Family participation in children's learning

by Richard W. Riley, U.S. Secretary of Education

During this the recent holiday season, as U.S. Secretary of Education, I had the pleasure of being part of the landmark announcement of more than 30 different religious organizations who came together to affirm their commitment to increase family involvement in learning. This wonderful statement of common purpose is very, very important. I encourage all people of faith across America to make increasing family involvement in education a high priority in your community.

This groundbreaking statement is but one part of a new, nationwide Family Involvement Partnership for Learning that has been designed to reinforce the central role of the family and to identify and overcome barriers to family participation in children's learning. The partnership embraces not only religious organizations, but parents, educators, businesses, and community groups as well.

The Family Involvement Partnership for Learning proceeds from the firm belief that it is parents and families who actually raise children. At the same time, the more than 100 organizations involved in this partnership, including the U.S. Department of Education, agree that there is a need for environments to be more supportive of families amidst the churning pressures of modern everyday life.

Religious leaders and institutions, given their moral authority and dedication to lifelong learning, play a significant role in the partnership for family involvement. The fact that this distinguished and diverse group of religious organizations has come together to embrace the cause of increasing family involvement in learning is one of the outstanding features of this nationwide coalition.

The religious organizations that supported the statement of common purpose represent some 75 percent of religiously affiliated Americans. They have issued an eloquent call for action. It is my hope that this call will echo in every community across our nation.

In their statement, the religious leaders say. "We believe the participation of family members in the education and spiritual development of young people is fundamental to a child's preparation for adulthood and the responsibilities of citizenship. ... parents and guardians need to immerse themselves in the education of their children as never before."

They note, "... there are children who do not attend school regularly, whose test scores and grades falter, who have too much idle time, and whose parents are absent, too overwhelmed or too busy to spend time reading, talking, praying, (and) playing (with their children and) listening (to them), helping, or encouraging them."

"Religious communities hear this cry," their statement continues. "We call upon all citizens, religious communities, community organizations, and businesses to do their share. We urge family members to become actively involved in their children's education, religious communities to work to better understand and meet educational and family needs, community organizations to sponsor meaningful youth-and family-oriented activities, and businesses to adopt family friendly policies in the workplace."

I believe that many parents feel overwhelmed by all the outside influences shaping the lives of their children. They feel that our popular culture undermines the values they want their children to have. They see so many of our young people growing up rudderless-without any sense of why they ought to study hard or what it means to be a good citizen.

In homes where both parents work, or where only one parent is present, parents may find it difficult to carve out the time needed to help their children learn. Many parents are unsure how to act most effectively to help their children learn at school and at home. In some communities, lack of services and institutions may limit the opportunities for young people to learn. And parents struggle everywhere to instill proper values in their children and to teach their youngsters about the dangers of drugs and alcohol.

The Family Involvement Partnership for Learning emphasizes the special responsibilities of various groups - and the powerfully positive effect we can achieve by working together.

Parents can read with their children, establish a daily routine for learning, check homework, set high expectations, and encourage students to enroll in rigorous courses. Schools can set challenging standards, improve communications with families, and make parents feel welcome both in the school and in the learning process. Businesses can provide flexible work hours so that parents have time available to participate in school activities.

Religious communities can establish networks of support for families and provide mentors and volunteers. Communities can extend and enrich the learning day through libraries, museums, and other cultural institutions.

Every part of the community should, once again, rally around parents to help them give their children a strong moral and spiritual center, as well as a sense of individual responsibility and educational achievement. As we begin a new year, I am heartened by the enthusiastic participation of religious communities in the Family Involvement Partnership for Learning. They have turned their convictions into commitment and set a cooperative example for all of us.

At a time when so many young people are at risk of losing their way, America's religious communities provide a sense of direction and purpose. At a time when the public dialogue is full of cynicism and recrimination, they offer a different course, one based on caring and mutual respect. At a time of intense focus on what divides and polarizes America, they seek common and compromising ground. As we heed these voices of hope and faith, we will be rewarded with stronger families, stronger schools and a stronger America.

Have a winning Super Bowl party

San Diego Charger fans not fortunate enough to travel to Miami for the Super Bowl are making extensive preparations to watch the game. Wherever fans party, it is anticipated that a considerable amount of alcohol will be consumed.

"It has been documented that on occasions of heavy drinking, such as Super Bowl Sunday, the incidence of impaired driving, domestic violence and other alcohol-related problems increase," according to Karen Zaustinsky, director of the Lemon Grove Project. The Lemon Grove Project is working with the Responsible Hospitality Council of San Diego County to highlight the important role alcohol retailers and social hosts can have in creating environments which reduce the risk of problems caused by alcohol. Responsible beverage service is a proactive approach to 1) reduce the likelihood of those being served alcohol from becoming intoxicated, 2) prevent the service of alcohol to those too young to drink, 3) prevent those who are intoxicated from driving, and 4) to promote community awareness, action and support for prevention strategies.

The pictorials on this page were developed by the Responsible Hospitality Council to provide tips for party planners in an effort to help make their get-togethers alcohol safe. The council is a voluntary organization of restaurant owners, bar owners, and hoteliers with a common interest in responsible hospitality, health and safety.

The party tips include tips for pre-game preparations, game-time suggestions and post-game recommendations. "Let's all cheer our Chargers on to victory and have a sensible, safe and enjoyable time in the process," said Zaustinsky.

The Lemon Grove Project is a County Health Services funded program to build a healthier community and reduce problems associated with alcohol and other drugs. Zaustinsky, who also serves as Co-Chair of the San Diego County Council on Alcohol Policy, can be reached at 465-5864.

Reel Brief Legends Of The Fall

by Betty Jo Tucker

One of the most eagerly anticipated movies of the year, Legends Of The Fall unfortunately contains little legend and falls flat on its face - maybe not at the box office, but certainly as an artistic effort. It is filled with unbelievable dramatic situations, overblown music, and underwhelming performances, except for Brad Pitt's immensely watchable work as "Tristan."

In Legends Of The Fall, three brothers living on a Montana ranch in the early 1900s (played by Aidan Quinn, Brad Pitt, and Henry Thomas fall in love with the same woman. As their sometimes tyrannical father, Anthony Hopkins chews the scenery just a little less than he did as the health guru in The Road To Wellville. Playing the love interest, Julia Ormond expresses strong emotion by biting her fingernails. Aidan Quinn as the older brother delivers his lines in a stilted, strained manner, and Henry Thomas plays the youngest, idealistic brother with a disappointing blandness. Brad Pitt, a breath of fresh air in this Western soap opera, makes Legends almost worth seeing because of his amazing portrayal of the reckless, unpredictable middle brother. Pitt's passionate "Tristan" grabs our interest and pulls us into some pretty ridiculous scenes, even the one where he cuts out his dead brother's heart.

Ponderous direction by Edward Zwick and unrealistic dialogue by Susan Shilliday and Bill Witliff contribute to the downfall of this dreadful, non-legendary melodrama.

Letter to the editor

The important point however, is that the City of Lemon Grove joined almost every other governmental entity in the State of California claiming that it should not be responsible in such a situation. It is shocking in this day and age that a governmental entity would even suggest such a position. The state just endured an election campaign in which politicians engaged in rhetoric about victims' rights and the need for society to take responsibility for its actions. People on welfare were urged to take responsibility for their plight. The unemployed were urged to take responsibility. Unwed mothers were urged to take responsibility. And yet when the issue was placed squarely before it, the City of Lemon Grove chose to claim that it was not responsible for even its own law enforcement officers. How can individual citizens like the Menendez brothers, Denny's assailant and Bobbitt be expected to take responsibility when the governmental entities which were pledged to protect all citizens do not?

Please explain to me how the City of Lemon Grove could have possibly taken such an irresponsible position? The fact that the Appellate Court and the California Supreme Court rejected that position is no excuse for such conduct.

Practice, practice, practice ... and fun

by Lora Clark

While most Lemon Grove residents are indoors after the sun goes down, doing whatever they can to keep warm, two of them are not only outdoors, they're in a swimming pool.

Between 6 and 9 p.m., three nights a week, and on Saturdays and Sundays as well, Annette Gentils and Bridget Levikow can be found at Mt. Miguel High School, swimming laps and practicing underwater routines. They are members of the Sweetwater Dolphins, an internationally known synchronized swim team.

Gentils got her start in synchronized swimming when she was six years of age.

"I had been involved with gymnastics and wanted to get into another sport," said Gentils. "My cousin Bridget had joined a synchro swim team, so I decided to try it, too!"

She not only tried it, she excelled in it. During the three years she's been participating in synchro, she has been awarded five medals, eight ribbons, two plaques, and a trophy. In 1993, she was a member of the Junior Olympics Novice Team, which took fourth place. This year, Gentils went from tenth place in Figures at the Cerritos meet to third place in the 11-and-under category of the Associate Meet held at Monte Vista High School, where she also placed first in Team and Trio. She took a first place for Team and Trio in the Novice Meet in Palm Springs and is scheduled to perform a solo and a duet at the 1995 Regional Junior Olympics to be held in San Diego.

Although Gentils is only nine years of age, she is a member of the B Team in the 12/13 year-old category and is first alternate for the A Team.

"I've learned a lot in synchro," said Gentils. "How to be a part of a team, how to do things that are hard - and do them happily - and how to follow instructions given by the coaches.

"It's a lot of fun for me," continued Gentils. "I like everything about synchro - even the warm-ups we have to do before we start practicing our routines!"

Gentils explained that the warm-ups consist of swimming 300 meters freestyle, followed by three laps each of the butterfly stroke, freestyle, backstroke, and breaststroke.

"Then we do five Unders and Overs," continued Gentils. "We go underwater as deep as we can and swim to the other side of the pool, then come back on top of the water, using freestyle. "All of that's fun for me, because it's a challenge to see how well I can do!"

Gentils plans to continue with her synchro swimming. She hopes to get a scholarship for college and be on a synchro team while she completes her education.

"And I'd like to perform a solo at the Olympics!" stated Gentils.

In addition to practicing many hours a week, this energetic 4-foot-9-inch athlete maintains a B+ average in her fourth-grade studies at Coleman Prep School in La Mesa. She even finds time to collect Matchbox cars, draw cartoons, and go bike riding and rollerblading.

Bridget Levikow (pronounced Lev-ah-coe) was introduced to synchronized swimming through a brochure listing the activities that were available through the La Mesa Recreation Center. This 5-foot-4-inch 12-year-old learned to swim when she was four years of age and has accumulated nine ribbons, eight medals, two plaques, and one trophy during her three-year association with the Sweetwater Dolphins. Her 11-and-under team took fourth place in the 1993 Junior Olympics. In 1994 she moved up to the 12/13 B Team, which took second place at the Association Meet and second place at a meet held in Cerritos.

"I have a lot of fun working with the team," said Levikow, "and I like being in the water and doing the routines. The only part that's hard for me is being out in the cold."

Levikow, a sixth-grader at Palm Middle School, maintains a B average and spends her free time reading novels, riding her bike, rollerblading, and listening to country/western music. She also enjoys doing artwork. One of her drawings was awarded a second-place ribbon at the 1993 Del Mar Fair.

While the swimmers are in the water, a vital part of the team is in the bleachers, cheering them on, planning future performances, designing costumes, and discussing travel arrangements to the next meet.

These are the parents, who give liberally of their time and talents to benefit the team.

"We, as a family, must commit to the team," stated Mary Levikow, Bridget's mother. "It's not just the girls swimming. The parents are deeply involved in fund-raising, making costumes, and taking care of the countless details that must be handled. The entire family participates and must be committed to the team."

Yet, even when everyone is committed and doing their best, the team must sometimes decline participation at national and international competitions, as there is not enough money available to cover the expenses involved.

"We're not funded by any of the community services," explained Jackie McDaniel, team manager. "In many of the states on the East Coast, a community supports the team financially. The members have no dues, no pool fees, no clothing costs, and no travel expenses. Some communities have even built an indoor pool for the exclusive use of the synchro swim teams.

"To us here on the West Coast, knowing that is very disheartening," continued McDaniel. "We have to use whatever pool is available, and we must pay a fee for using it. We pay for everything ourselves - meet fees, costumes, travel expenses. It's been very difficult to get any kind of support from San Diego and the outlying communities. This is very frustrating, because when these girls are competing at the meets they are representing San Diego County. They are, in a very real sense, young ambassadors, yet they are not supported by those they represent!"

And, because they receive no funds from the communities of San Diego County, the whole team - moms, dads, and girls - work hard to plan successful fund-raisers. They present a synchro swim show in the summer, a swim-a-thon in the fall, and a golf tournament in the spring. All proceeds from these events are used to help defray the enormous costs involved in training and competing.

"The paychecks far outweigh the costs," exclaimed Theresa Gentils, Annette's mother. "Her dad and I started this because we wanted Annette to have a healthy outlet, and we wanted her to experience team camaraderie. She's benefitted in those areas and in others, as well. She's built close friendships with some of the team members, and she's learned to respect those she doesn't agree with and to execute the routines no matter how she feels about them. She's learning that not all aspects of life are fun-filled. Lots of hard work is necessary, too, and she's seeing the importance of doing her best and is experiencing the satisfaction of being rewarded for her efforts."

"I agree with my wife," said Buddy Gentils. "Annette is stronger, and she knows how to be a part of a team, which is an important thing to learn in life."

"Bridget has learned to get along with others and is gaining confidence as she performs in front of audiences," added Mary. "Synchro develops graceful movements and coordination, and it builds her character. She's learning self-discipline and the value of hard work. She's always willing to go to practice sessions. She doesn't wimp out, even when it's cold and rainy."
